

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
DISTRICT OF NEVADA

WAYNE A. PORETTI,

Plaintiff,

Y.

DZURENDÁ, et al.,

Defendants.

Case No. 2:17-cv-01745-RFB-CWH

SCREENING ORDER

15 Plaintiff, who is a prisoner in the custody of the Nevada Department of Corrections 16 (“NDOC”), has submitted a civil rights complaint pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1983 and has 17 filed an application to proceed in forma pauperis. (ECF No. 1-1, 10.) Plaintiff also has 18 filed a motion to extend the prison copy work limit. (ECF No. 4).

19 The matter of the filing fee shall be temporarily deferred. The Court now screens 20 Plaintiff's civil rights complaint pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1915A and addresses the motion 21 to extend the copy work limit.

I. SCREENING STANDARD

23       Federal courts must conduct a preliminary screening in any case in which a 24       prisoner seeks redress from a governmental entity or officer or employee of a 25       governmental entity. See 28 U.S.C. § 1915A(a). In its review, the court must identify any 26       cognizable claims and dismiss any claims that are frivolous, malicious, fail to state a claim 27       upon which relief may be granted, or seek monetary relief from a defendant who is 28       immune from such relief. See 28 U.S.C. § 1915A(b)(1),(2). Pro se pleadings, however,

1 must be liberally construed. Balistreri v. Pacifica Police Dep't, 901 F.2d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 2
2 1990). To state a claim under 42 U.S.C. § 1983, a plaintiff must allege two essential 3
3 elements: (1) the violation of a right secured by the Constitution or laws of the United 4 4 States, and (2) that the alleged violation was committed by a person acting under color 5 5 of state law. See West v. Atkins, 487 U.S. 42, 48 (1988).

6 In addition to the screening requirements under § 1915A, pursuant to the Prison 7 7 Litigation Reform Act (PLRA), a federal court must dismiss a prisoner's claim if "the 8 8 allegation of poverty is untrue" or if the action "is frivolous or malicious, fails to state a 9 9 claim on which relief may be granted, or seeks monetary relief against a defendant who 10 10 is immune from such relief." 28 U.S.C. § 1915(e)(2). Dismissal of a complaint for failure 11 11 to state a claim upon which relief can be granted is provided for in Federal Rule of Civil 12 12 Procedure 12(b)(6), and the court applies the same standard under § 1915 when 13 13 reviewing the adequacy of a complaint or an amended complaint. When a court 14 14 dismisses a complaint under § 1915(e), the plaintiff should be given leave to amend the 15 15 complaint with directions as to curing its deficiencies, unless it is clear from the face of 16 16 the complaint that the deficiencies could not be cured by amendment. See Cato v. United 17 17 States, 70 F.3d 1103, 1106 (9th Cir. 1995).

18 Review under Rule 12(b)(6) is essentially a ruling on a question of law. See 19 19 Chappel v. Lab. Corp. of America, 232 F.3d 719, 723 (9th Cir. 2000). Dismissal for failure 20 20 to state a claim is proper only if it is clear that the plaintiff cannot prove any set of facts in 21 21 support of the claim that would entitle him or her to relief. See Morley v. Walker, 175 F.3d 22 22 756, 759 (9th Cir. 1999). In making this determination, the court takes as true all 23 23 allegations of material fact stated in the complaint, and the court construes them in the 24 24 light most favorable to the plaintiff. See Warshaw v. Xoma Corp., 74 F.3d 955, 957 (9th 25 25 Cir. 1996). Allegations of a pro se complainant are held to less stringent standards than 26 26 formal pleadings drafted by lawyers. See Hughes v. Rowe, 449 U.S. 5, 9 (1980). While 27
27 the standard under Rule 12(b)(6) does not require detailed factual allegations, a plaintiff 28 28 must provide more than mere labels and conclusions. Bell Atlantic Corp. v. Twombly,

1 550 U.S. 544, 555 (2007). A formulaic recitation of the elements of a cause of action is 2 insufficient. Id.

3 Additionally, a reviewing court should “begin by identifying pleadings [allegations] 4 that, because they are no more than mere conclusions, are not entitled to the assumption 5 of truth.” Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 679 (2009). “While legal conclusions can 6 provide the framework of a complaint, they must be supported with factual allegations.”
7 Id. “When there are well-pleaded factual allegations, a court should assume their veracity 8 and then determine whether they plausibly give rise to an entitlement to relief.” Id.
9 “Determining whether a complaint states a plausible claim for relief . . . [is] a context-10 specific task that requires the reviewing court to draw on its judicial experience and 11 common sense.” Id.

12 Finally, all or part of a complaint filed by a prisoner may therefore be dismissed 13 sua sponte if the prisoner’s claims lack an arguable basis either in law or in fact. This 14 includes claims based on legal conclusions that are untenable (e.g., claims against 15 defendants who are immune from suit or claims of infringement of a legal interest which 16 clearly does not exist), as well as claims based on fanciful factual allegations (e.g., 17 fantastic or delusional scenarios). See Neitzke v. Williams, 490 U.S. 319, 327-28 (1989); 18 see also McKeever v. Block, 932 F.2d 795, 798 (9th Cir. 1991).

19 II. SCREENING OF COMPLAINT

20 In his complaint, Plaintiff sues multiple Defendants for events that took place while 21 he was incarcerated at High Desert State Prison (HDSP). Plaintiff sues Dzurenda, 22 Aranas, Governor Sandoval, Linda Fox, Williams, B. Rio, Adam Paul Laxalt, and Wonka.
23 (ECF No. 1-1 at 2-4). Plaintiff alleges three counts and seeks injunctive relief and 24 damages. (Id. at 5-8, 11).

25 In his complaint, Plaintiff alleges the following: Plaintiff suffers from a neurological 26 disorder, Tourette’s, and has been diagnosed as having OCD, ADHD, and schizophrenia 27 and being paranoid, psychotic, and delusional. (Id. at 4).

28 When Plaintiff arrived at HDSP in March 2016, medical staff did not provide him

1 with his psychiatric medications and the medications he took for neurological problems, 2 because these medications (Wellbutrin and Seroquel) were not on the formulary. (Id. at 3 4, 6). The new medicines ordered by NDOC did not help. (Id. at 6). Plaintiff heard voices 4 in the vent of the cell and would not go back in. (Id.) He therefore was put in the hold.
5 (Id.)

6 Plaintiff subsequently entered a plea of guilty but mentally ill to the crime of grand 7 larceny. (Id. at 6, 15). In the May 2017 judgment, the Clark County District Court ordered 8 that Plaintiff receive treatment for his mental illness during the period of confinement “in 9 conformity with such treatment as is medically indicated for the defendant’s mental 10 illness.” (Id. at 6, 15).

11 On May 25, 2017, the Director of Prisons and medical staff eliminated Plaintiff’s 12 medication for no other reason than cost. (Id. at 6). Medical never even saw Plaintiff to 13 determine what medication worked or did not work, but ordered a medication he took 14 before that did not help. (Id.) Plaintiff’s doctors and SNAMH had gone through many 15 medicines because one medicine helps him and others make him worse or cause other 16 neurological problems. (Id. at 4).

17 Linda Fox, the Director of Pharmacy, allows for the inmates to be improperly 18 treated by not providing the necessary medications to them and reducing the number of 19 inmates who are treated with more expensive psychotropic medications. Plaintiff told her 20 that his medicines had been discontinued and that staff changed his medication without 21 seeing him. (Id.) He did not hear back from her. (Id.) Plaintiff contends that this is 22 medical neglect. (Id.) Plaintiff also said that he had taken the ordered medicine before 23 and had side effects. (Id.)

24 Plaintiff saw a psychologist or psychiatrist at HDSP, who told him that the Medical 25 Director and Linda Fox had stopped any medicines that are not on the formulary. (Id. at 26 7). The doctor then ordered a medication, risperdal, that has a side effect of causing 27 male breasts. (Id.) Plaintiff was told that this was his only choice since Linda Fox and 28 Dr. Aranas had cut the formulary. (Id.)

1        The Lakes Crossing doctors agreed that the medicines Wellbutrin and Seroquel 2 are the best medicines for Plaintiff, relieving some of his ailments without causing bad 3 side effects. (Id. at 8). Most medicines will help one neurological problem, but make 4 another one worse. (Id.)

5        Plaintiff is now taking Effexor. (Id.) According to a television commercial, this 6 medication has a side effect of causing breasts. (Id.) Plaintiff has filed many kites 7 regarding his problems with medication. (Id. at 7).

8        Plaintiff alleges that this conduct violated the Eighth Amendment, the Fourteenth 9 Amendment's Equal Protection Clause, the Nevada Constitution, and Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 10 176.057(1)(b) and 174.063.

11        A. Federal Claims

12        1. Eighth Amendment

13        The Eighth Amendment prohibits the imposition of cruel and unusual punishment 14 and "embodies 'broad and idealistic concepts of dignity, civilized standards, humanity, 15 and decency.'" Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 102 (1976). A prison official violates the 16 Eighth Amendment when he acts with "deliberate indifference" to the serious medical 17 needs of an inmate. Farmer v. Brennan, 511 U.S. 825, 828 (1994). "To establish an 18 Eighth Amendment violation, a plaintiff must satisfy both an objective standard—that the 19 deprivation was serious enough to constitute cruel and unusual punishment—and a 20 subjective standard—deliberate indifference." Snow v. McDaniel, 681 F.3d 978, 985 (9th 21 Cir. 2012).

22        To establish the first prong, "the plaintiff must show a serious medical need by 23 demonstrating that failure to treat a prisoner's condition could result in further significant 24 injury or the unnecessary and wanton infliction of pain." Jett v. Penner, 439 F.3d 1091, 25 1096 (9th Cir. 2006) (internal quotations omitted). To prove deliberate indifference, a 26 plaintiff must prove that the prison official "knows of and disregards an excessive risk to 27 inmate health or safety; the official must both be aware of facts from which the inference 28 could be drawn that a substantial risk of serious harm exists, and he must also draw the

1 inference.” Farmer, 511 U.S. at 837; see also Peralta v. Dillard, 744 F.3d 1076, 1086 (9th
2 Cir. 2014) (en banc). Thus, “a complaint that a physician has been negligent in diagnosing 3 or treating a medical condition does not state a valid claim of medical mistreatment under 4 the Eighth Amendment. Medical malpractice does not become a constitutional violation 5 merely because the victim is a prisoner.” Estelle v. Gamble, 429 U.S. 97, 106 (1976).
6 Even gross negligence is insufficient to establish deliberate indifference to serious 7 medical needs. See Toguchi v. Chung, 391 F.3d 1051, 1060 (9th Cir. 2004).

8 To satisfy the deliberate indifference prong, a plaintiff must show “(a) a purposeful 9 act or failure to respond to a prisoner’s pain or possible medical need and (b) harm caused 10 by the indifference.” Jett, 439 F.3d at 1096. “Indifference may appear when prison 11 officials deny, delay or intentionally interfere with medical treatment, or it may be shown 12 by the way in which prison physicians provide medical care.” Id. (internal quotations 13 omitted). It is the paradigm of deliberate indifference when a particular treatment for 14 patients is medically indicated, but there is a blanket, categorical denial of medical 15 treatment on the basis of an administrative policy that requires prisoners with particular 16 serious medical needs to go without the proper medical care. Colwell v. Bannister, 763 17 F.3d 1060, 1063, 1068 (9th Cir. 2014). However, when an individual medical official who 18 is not responsible for adopting the policy but is required to follow that policy “fails to 19 provide needed treatment because he lacks the necessary resources”, he “can hardly be 20 said to have intended to punish the inmate.” Peralta v. Dillard, 744 F.3d 1076, 1084 (9th 21 Cir. 2014) (en banc).

22 A difference of opinion between medical professionals concerning the appropriate 23 course of treatment generally does not amount to deliberate indifference to serious 24 medical needs. Sanchez v. Vild, 891 F.2d 240, 242 (9th Cir. 1989). Additionally, “[a] 25 difference of opinion between a prisoner-patient and prison medical authorities regarding 26 treatment does not give rise to a § 1983 claim.” Franklin v. State of Or., State Welfare 27 Div., 662 F.2d 1337, 1344 (9th Cir. 1981). To establish that a difference of opinion 28 amounted to deliberate indifference, the prisoner “must show that the course of treatment

1 the doctors chose was medically unacceptable under the circumstances" and "that they 2 chose this course in conscious disregard of an excessive risk to [the prisoner's] health." 3 Jackson v. McIntosh, 90 F.3d 330, 332 (9th Cir. 1996).

4 A defendant is liable under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 "only upon a showing of personal 5 participation by the defendant." Taylor v. List, 880 F.2d 1040, 1045 (9th Cir. 1989). "A 6 supervisor is only liable for constitutional violations of his subordinates if the supervisor 7 participated in or directed the violations, or knew of the violations and failed to act to 8 prevent them. There is no respondeat superior liability under [§]1983." Id.; see also 9 Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 U.S. 662, 676 (2009) (holding that "[b]ecause vicarious liability is 10 inapplicable to Bivens and § 1983 suits, a plaintiff must plead that each Government-11 official defendant, through the official's own individual actions, has violated the 12 Constitution").

13 "A showing that a supervisor acted, or failed to act, in a manner that was 14 deliberately indifferent to an inmate's Eighth Amendment rights is sufficient to 15 demonstrate the involvement—and the liability—of that supervisor." Starr v. Baca, 652 16 F.3d 1202, 1206-07 (9th Cir. 2011). "Thus, when a supervisor is found liable based on 17 deliberate indifference, the supervisor is being held liable for his or her own culpable 18 action or inaction, not held vicariously liable for the culpable action or inaction of his or 19 her subordinates." Id. at 1207. Therefore, "a plaintiff may state a claim against a 20 supervisor for deliberate indifference based upon the supervisor's knowledge of and 21 acquiescence in unconstitutional conduct by his or her subordinates." Id. There must be 22 a sufficient causal connection between his or her wrongful conduct and the Constitutional 23 violation. Id.

24 Plaintiff has not yet stated a colorable claim for deliberate indifference to serious 25 medical needs. Plaintiff has adequately alleged serious medical needs, which include his 26 Tourette's and his mental illnesses. However, according to the complaint, Plaintiff 27 appears to have started a medication called Effexor.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff has not alleged that this

28 <sup>1</sup> It is not clear from the complaint whether Plaintiff is alleging that he filed

1 medication is ineffective or has otherwise caused him serious health problems. Although 2 he has alleged that, in the past, he has been prescribed medication that did not work or 3 that had side effects, he has not alleged that Effexor was one of these drugs and has not 4 alleged that any of the Defendants knew that Effexor had an adverse effect on him.
5 Although Plaintiff clearly would prefer to take different medications, neither a patient's 6 disagreement with a doctor's course of treatment nor allegations amounting to negligence 7 are sufficient to state a claim for deliberate indifference to serious medical needs. The 8 Court therefore will dismiss this claim without prejudice, with leave to amend. If Plaintiff 9 chooses to amend this claim, he must allege what each Defendant did to cause him harm.
10 Furthermore, for each Defendant, Plaintiff must adequately allege facts sufficient to show 11 that the particular Defendant knew of Plaintiff's particular medical needs, understood that 12 these medical needs were serious, believed that particular medical treatment was 13 required, but nevertheless denied that particular medical treatment, causing harm to 14 Plaintiff.

15 2. Fourteenth Amendment -- Equal Protection

16 The Equal Protection Clause of the Fourteenth Amendment is essentially a 17 directive that all similarly situated persons be treated equally under the law. City of 18 Cleburne, Tex. v. Cleburne Living Ctr., 473 U.S. 432, 439 (1985). In order to state an 19 equal protection claim, a plaintiff must allege facts demonstrating that defendants acted 20 with the intent and purpose to discriminate against him based upon membership in a

21 grievances and is seeking damages based on the period of time in March 2016 that 22 Plaintiff was placed on new medicines that did not work. To the extent he is relying on 23 this experience to state a claim, Plaintiff fails to do so. He has not adequately alleged 24 who it was who made the decision to change his medications at that time and has not 25 adequately alleged facts sufficient to show deliberate indifference by any of the 26 Defendants. Although it is not entirely clear from the complaint, it appears that Plaintiff is 27 alleging that the doctor put Plaintiff back on his old medications when the doctor realized 28 that the new medications did not work, indicating that the doctor had discretion to choose which medication to prescribe and wished to prescribe effective medication. These factual allegations do not adequately allege deliberate indifference. If Plaintiff wishes to rely on his March 2016 experiences to state a claim, he should make that clear in the amended complaint. Furthermore, Plaintiff must allege facts sufficient to show what each Defendant knew and believed about Plaintiff's medical condition at that time and must allege facts sufficient to show that the particular Defendant believed that the change in medication would adversely affect Plaintiff, had the authority to keep Defendant on the same medication, but was responsible for changing the medication anyway.

1 protected class, or that defendants purposefully treated him differently than similarly 2 situated individuals without any rational basis for the disparate treatment. Lee v. City of 3 Los Angeles, 250 F.3d 668, 686 (9th Cir. 2001); see also Vill. of Willowbrook v. Olech, 4 528 U.S. 562, 564 (2000).

5 When analyzing a discrimination claim under the Fourteenth Amendment, the 6 courts “must first determine the appropriate level of scrutiny to be applied. If the rule 7 disadvantages a suspect class or impinges upon a fundamental right, the court will 8 examine it by applying a strict scrutiny standard. If no such suspect class or fundamental 9 rights are involved, the conduct or rule must be analyzed under a rational basis test.”
10 Giannini v. Real, 911 F.2d 354, 358 (9th Cir. 1990).

11 In Olech, the Supreme Court explicitly addressed “whether the Equal Protection 12 Clause gives rise to a cause of action on behalf of a ‘class of one’ where the plaintiff did 13 not allege membership in a class or group.” 528 U.S. at 564. The Supreme Court ruled 14 in the affirmative and “recognized successful equal protection claims brought by a ‘class 15 of one,’ where the plaintiff alleges that she has been intentionally treated differently from 16 others similarly situated and that there is no rational basis for the difference in 17 treatment.” Id.; see also Engquist v. Oregon Dep’t of Agr., 553 U.S. 591, 601 (2008) 18 (recognizing that an equal protection claim may be maintained in some circumstances 19 even if the plaintiff does not allege class-based discrimination, “but instead claims that 20 she has been irrationally singled out as a so-called ‘class of one’”).

21 The Supreme Court held that “the purpose of the equal protection clause of the 22 Fourteenth Amendment is to secure every person within the State’s jurisdiction against 23 intentional and arbitrary discrimination, whether occasioned by express terms of a 24 statute or by its improper execution through duly constituted agents.” Id. Although the 25 Supreme Court has acknowledged the class-of-one theory of equal protection, it has 26 held that the theory does not apply when the state action “by their nature involve 27 discretionary decisionmaking based on a vast array of subjective, individualized 28

1 assessments.” Engquist v. Oregon Dep’t of Agr., 553 U.S. 591, 603 (2008); see also 2 Towery v. Brewer, 672 F.3d 650, 660–61 (9th Cir. 2012).

3 To state a “class-of-one” equal protection claim, the Plaintiff must identify the 4 group of individuals with whom he is similarly situated, identify the allegedly intentional 5 and disparate treatment, and allege that there was no rational basis for the different 6 treatment. Gerhart v. Lake Cty., Mont., 637 F.3d 1013, 1022 (9th Cir. 2011); Chappell
7 v. Bess, No. 2:01-CV-01979 KJN P, 2012 WL 3276984, at *19–21 (E.D. Cal. Aug. 9, 8 2012).

9 Plaintiff has failed to state a colorable equal protection claim. Plaintiff has not 10 alleged that any Defendant acted with the intent and purpose to discriminate against 11 him based upon membership in a protected class. In addition, for purposes of a class-12 of-one equal protection claim, Plaintiff has not adequately identified the group of people 13 to whom he is similarly situated and has not alleged that any Defendant intentionally 14 and irrationally singled him out for different treatment from that group. Given these 15 deficiencies, the Court will dismiss the equal protection claim for failure to state a claim.
16 The claim is dismissed without prejudice, and Plaintiff is given leave to amend the claim 17 to cure the deficiencies in the claim. If Plaintiff chooses to amend this claim, he must 18 allege facts sufficient to show that Defendants discriminated against him based on his 19 membership in a particular class or he must adequately allege that the class-of-one 20 theory applies and allege facts sufficient to identify the group of people to whom he is 21 similarly situated and that Defendants irrationally singled him out for different treatment.

22

B. State Claims

23 Plaintiff alleges violations of Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 176.057(1)(b) and 174.063 and the 24 Nevada Constitution. These claims would be a violation of state law, not a violation of 25 federal law. Section 1983 does not provide a cause of action for violations of state law.
26 See Galen v. County of Los Angeles, 477 F.3d 652, 662 (9th Cir. 2007).

27 Furthermore, it appears that Plaintiff refers to Nev. Rev. Stat. §§ 176.057(1)(b) and

1 174.063 because he wishes to enforce the state court criminal judgment's provisions 2 regarding treatment for mental illness. Plaintiff must seek such relief in state court, not 3 federal court.

4 In addition, Plaintiff has failed to state a claim for a violation of the Nevada 5 Constitution because Plaintiff has not even alleged what part of the Nevada Constitution 6 has been violated.<sup>2</sup>

7 The Court therefore will dismiss the state law claims with prejudice.

8 III. LEAVE TO AMEND

9 Plaintiff is granted leave to file an amended complaint to cure the deficiencies of 10 the complaint. If Plaintiff chooses to file an amended complaint he is advised that an 11 amended complaint supersedes (replaces) the original complaint and, thus, the amended 12 complaint must be complete in itself. See Hal Roach Studios, Inc. v. Richard Feiner & 13 Co., Inc., 896 F.2d 1542, 1546 (9th Cir. 1989) (holding that “[t]he fact that a party was 14 named in the original complaint is irrelevant; an amended pleading supersedes the 15 original”); see also Lacey v. Maricopa Cnty., 693 F.3d 896, 928 (9th Cir. 2012) (holding 16 that for claims dismissed with prejudice, a plaintiff is not required to reallege such claims 17 in a subsequent amended complaint to preserve them for appeal). Plaintiff's amended 18 complaint must contain all claims, defendants, and factual allegations that Plaintiff wishes 19 to pursue in this lawsuit. Moreover, Plaintiff must file the amended complaint on this 20 Court's approved prisoner civil rights form and it must be entitled “First Amended 21

22

23 <sup>2</sup> State law claims generally are brought in state court. Although this Court does 24 not have original jurisdiction over state law claims, under certain limited conditions it may 25 choose to exercise supplemental jurisdiction over a plaintiff's state law claims if they “are 26 so related to claims in the action within such original jurisdiction that they form part of the 27 same case or controversy under Article III of the United States Constitution.” 28 U.S.C. § 28 1367(a). However, this does not apply to the enforcement of state court judgments. To the extent Plaintiff wishes to enforce the terms of the state court's criminal judgment, he may not do so in federal court. Furthermore, this Court cannot exercise supplemental jurisdiction over any state law claim unless and until Plaintiff states a cognizable federal claim. Cf. 28 U.S.C. § 1367(a); Herman Family Revocable Trust v. Teddy Bear, 254 F.3d 802, 805 (9th Cir. 2001).

1 Complaint."

2 The Court notes that if Plaintiff chooses to file an amended complaint curing the 3 deficiencies, as outlined in this order, Plaintiff shall file the amended complaint within 30 4 days from the date of entry of this order. If Plaintiff chooses not to file an amended 5 complaint curing the stated deficiencies, this action shall be dismissed with prejudice for 6 failure to state a claim.

7 IV. MOTION TO EXTEND COPY WORK LIMIT

8 Plaintiff has filed a motion to extend his copy work limit. (ECF No. 1-8). An inmate 9 has no constitutional right to free photocopying. Johnson v. Moore, 948 F.2d 517, 521 10 (9th Cir. 1991). Pursuant to NDOC administrative regulation 722.01(7)(D), inmates "can 11 only accrue a maximum of $100 debt for copy work expenses for all cases, not per case."
12 In this district, courts have found that they can order a prison to provide limited 13 photocopying when it is necessary for an inmate to provide copies to the court and other 14 parties. See Allen v. Clark Cnty. Det. Ctr., 2:10-CV-00857-RLH, 2011 WL 886343, *2 (D.
15 Nev. Mar. 11, 2011). In this case, the Court grants Plaintiff's request to extend his copy 16 work account limit by another $3.00.

24 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiff's motion to extend his copy work account

3 approved form for filing a § 1983 complaint, instructions for the same, and a copy of his

5 must use the approved form and he shall write the words "First Amended" above the 6 words "Civil Rights Complaint" in the caption.

7 IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that, if Plaintiff fails to file an amended complaint 8 curing the deficiencies outlined in this order, this action shall be dismissed with prejudice
